filing petitions to the ruler was a common practice in the history of the middle east but despite its social and political importance the institution of mazalim the so called investigation of complaints has still not been subjected to adequate investigation neither its normative regulations and regional settings nor the petitions themselves as a source for political economic social and administrative history the petitioning system in pre modern and modern iran being no exception in contrast to royal decrees or official historiography these petitions reflect complaints of people from all social strata men and women farmers religious people and state officials urban and rural population including nomads the petitions thus express the perspective of common people their desires and grievances about tax collectors and governors about the malfunctioning of the legal system and the royal administration this book is based on a sample of petitions which were submitted to nasir al din shah between 1301 1883 and 1303 1886 and contains the texts of a selection of these petitions pertaining to the year 1301 1883 1884 as well as their classification and an analysis of the role and functioning of this institution by considering the distinctiveness of the inter war years as a discrete period of colonial change this book addresses several larger issues such as tracing the origins of decolonization in the rise of colonial nationalism and a re assessment of the impact of inter war colonial rebellions in africa syria and indochina the book also connects french theories of colonial governance to the lived experience of colonial rule in a period scarred by war and economic dislocation the relationship between islamic law and society is an important issue in iran under the islamic republic although islamic law was a pivotal element in the traditional iranian society no comprehensive research has been made until today this is because modern reformers emphasized the lack of rule of law in nineteenth century iran however a legal system did exist and islamic law was a substantial part of it this is the first book on the relationship between islamic law and the iranian society during the nineteenth century the author explores the legal aspects of urban society in iran and provides the social context in which political process occurred and examines how authorities applied law in society how people utilized the law and how the law regulated society based on rich archival sources including court records and private deeds from qajar tehran this book explores how islamic law functioned in iranian society the judicial system sharia court and religious endowments vaqf are fully discussed and the role of ulama as legal experts is highlighted throughout the book it challenges nationalist and modernist views on nineteenth century iran and provides a unique model in terms of the relationship between islamic law and society which is rather different from the ottoman case providing an understanding of this legal system in iran and its role in society this book offers a basis for assessing the motives and results of modern reforms as well as the modernist discourse this book will be of interest to students of middle eastern and iranian studies
