joshua noble focuses on the rapid appearance and disappearance in acts 2 and 4 of the motif that early believers hold all their property in common and argues that these descriptions function as allusions to the golden age myth noble suggests luke s claims that the believers had all things in common and that no one claimed private ownership of any possessions a motif that does not appear in any biblical source rather calls to mind greek and roman traditions that the earliest humans lived in utopian conditions when no one possessed any private property but all things were common by analyzing sources from greek latin jewish and christian traditions and reading acts 2 42 47 and 4 32 35 as golden age allusions noble illustrates how luke s use of the motif of common property is significant for understanding his attitude toward the roman empire noble suggests that luke s appeal to this myth accomplishes two things it characterizes the coming of the spirit as marking the beginning of a new age the start of a universal restoration that will find its completion at the second coming of christ and it creates a contrast between christ who has actually brought about this restoration and the emperors of rome who were serially credited with inaugurating a new golden age mr levin defines the myth of the golden age as a nostalgic statement of man s orientation in time an attempt at transcending the limits of history usually concentrating on a pre historic epoch an imaginary foreworld once perfected and now lost he myth holds up an anarchic vision of justice among men peace among peoples and love between the sexes and is a product of a reaction against the decadence of the present epoch whenever that may be when the focus shifts from the past to the future the standpoint shifts to the idea of progress in both cases especially the latter where specific plans can be envisaged it posits an ideal relation between man and man in this beautifully written book mr levin argues that because the myth emphasizes free will an ethic of hedonism and a cult of beauty it was an especially pertinent myth in the renaissance he finds that while painters attempted to portray the myth it remained essentially a literary subject and there are few men of letters in whose works there is not some sort of an allusion to it the humanistic revival of learning together with the unprecedented efflorescence of the arts acted out the fancy that the golden age had returned the topics mr levin treats prehistory ethics geography fiction pageantry and historiography allow unusual scope for the interplay of critical and historical interpretation publisher
