the debates around hindus and muslims islam and the west have become ever more relevant in contemporary politics in this timely book historian raziuddin aquil conducts a dispassionate and incisive study of islam in india from its heyday in the medieval period to its transformation by colonialism drawing on texts from the medieval and early modern periods aquil reveals the host of factors that contributed to the evolution of indian islam and its diverse practices the orthodoxy of the ulama the attempts by muslim rulers to establish religious dominance the conflict with sikhism the impact of sufi traditions and the rise of urdu as a popular language ambitious in scope provocatively argued and painstakingly researched the muslim question examines the legacy of the muslim rule in india and in the process presents islam as a complex and continually changing tradition the history of islam in india has resulted in impassioned debates between scholars from the secularists to the hindu right arguing that these histories tend to project modern concerns back in time raziuddin aquil conducts a dispassionate investigation of the period between the thirteenth and the nineteenth centuries from the heyday of muslim political domination of large areas of the subcontinent to the decline of the mughals accompanied by the transformations colonialism brought in its wake using texts from the medieval and early modern periods aquil uncovers connections between a variety of factors the religious orthodoxy or the ulama muslim rulers attempts to deal with competing religious ideologies the influence of sufi traditions the emergence of sikhism and its tenuous relationship with islam and the development of urdu as a language of the people situating his arguments in the context of contemporary politics involving hindus and muslims islam and the west and the longterm struggles within muslim societies between reason and faith aquil contends that some of the issues explored here have come down to us from medieval times while others have been transformed completely into concerns that are purely modern in origin penetrating and readable in the name of allah tackles the legacy of muslim rule in india and in the process presents islam as a complex and continually changing tradition this book focuses on the impact of hindu cultural and religious practices on the indian muslims as a minority indian muslims have been living in close proximity with the hindus since eleventh century while the traces left by muslim rule on indian society literature and culture have been well recognised the impact of hindus on muslims has not been studied to the extent desired spanning some twenty five years of research and writing the essays in this volume fall into two categories historiography and indo islamic civilization the former deals with how historians structure and answer the questions they choose to ask of the past the latter covers case studies of particular historical communities in india

this is an attempt to portray the life of indian muslims in all its aspects beginning with the advent of the muslim and ending with the present day in it indian muslim history has been divided into three phases early middle and modern and the various aspects of life and activity have been discussed under orthodoxy statesmanship and administration religious thought sufism poets and writers architecture and art and social life as the purpose of the book is to help in understanding rather than to provide all the information available only typical and significant ideas and personalities are discussed many questions are asked and discussed in the book which have so far been avoided or ignored is it possible to define the indian muslim are the indian muslims now and have they ever been a homogenous community have the indian muslim individually or collectively possessed any recognized rights to judge and oppose the ruler on moral or religious grounds if they have not could the ruler claim to represent the muslims as a religious community what was in fact the status and the power of the official representatives of institutional religion were there any tensions within the indian muslim community and if there were what was their effect on the patterns of thought and behavior what was the nature and influence of the sufis and what were the transformations which occurred within sufism in course of time what was the character and the range of the relationships between indian muslims and the hindus and the forms in which they influenced each other what was the indian muslim contribution to the development of literature architecture and the minor arts to the refinement of taste to creation of a common culture and from where did they derive the stimulus to make this contribution this is the first comprehensive and objective sociological study of the indian muslim and is written by one who has lived through the political and social conflicts of twentieth century india and is taking an active part in the emotional integration of the indian people this selection of fifteen essays by modern french intellectuals focuses on religious syncretism m waseem s introduction outlines the gradual amalgamation of different religious elements during the spread of islam as described by these french intellectuals after 1947 muslims of india acquired a different form in terms of their role status problems challenges and opportunities the partition of the country divided them in two and later three parts and led their political bureaucratic and intellectual elite to migrate to pakistan the expert opinion was divided about their very future w c smith a renowned scholar of islam for instance believed that islam in india would emerge as more progressive dynamic liberal and creative than pakistani islam the fact that muslims in india bear the same proportion in indian population as those in the world bear to the world population make their experience of universal value religion has two components one is set of theological beliefs and practices two as a basis of a social identity even those who do not follow its beliefs and practices and are agnostics or atheists are an integral part of a religious community this book is primarily a study of muslim community since partition but some references to pre partition lessons and islam based on its acknowledged authorities were inevitable for the study of contemporary problems of the community this study of micro problems of indian muslims is a humble contribution to the vastly grown scholarly work on macro islam about the author balraj puri started his public career in 1942 as editor of a urdu weekly in jammu he has written over a thousand articles and authored or co authored around forty books intercommunity relations and problems and potentialities of muslims in india have been a matter of his special interest as a social and political activist as also a writer apart from intervening in many conflict situation he has been extensively writing on these subjects for national dailies and academic journals and addressed many academic gatherings he has been interacting with muslim scholars and leaders of the country belonging to various schools of thought he is vice president of the minority council description preface 1 the religious objective of the muslim conquerors 2 the methods of the conquerors 3 peaceful penetration 4 organization of the sunni community 5 shi'ahs and mahdawis 6 religious orders 7 saint worship 8 islam in its hindu environment 9 modern movements reactionary and progressive 10 the parting of the ways 11 the new muslim apologetic and polemic monograph on social integration of the islamic minority group in india examines cultural factors which have contributed to social conflict and unharmonious intergroup relations presents survey data etc and recommends that moslems undertake voluntary cultural change and undergo acculturation to the surrounding hindu majority islam in india as elsewhere continues to be seen as a remainder in its refusal to conform to national and international secular modern norms such a general perception has also had a tremendous impact on the muslims of the indian subcontinent who as individuals and communities have been shaped and transformed over centuries of socio political and historical processes by eroding their world view and steadily erasing their life worlds this book traces the spectral presence of islam across narratives to note that difference and diversity demographic as well as cultural can be espoused rather than excised or exorcized focusing on malabar home to the mappila muslim community in kerala south india and drawing mostly on malayalam sources the author investigates the question of islam from various angles by constituting an archive comprising popular administrative academic and literary discourses the author contends that an uncritical insistence on unity has led to a formation in which minor subjects embody an excess of identity in contrast to the hindu citizen whose identity seemingly coincides with the national this has led to muslims being the source of a deep seated anxiety for secular nationalism and the targets of a resurgent hindutva in that they expose the fault lines of a geographically and socio culturally unified nation an interdisciplinary study of islam in india from the south indian context this book will be of interest to scholars of modern indian history political science literary and cultural studies and islamic studies
