we live in a time of human paradoxes scientific knowledge has reached a level of sophistication that permits understanding of the most arcane phenomena and yet religious fundamentalism dominates in many parts of the world we witness the emergence of a civil liberal constitutionalism in many regions of the world and yet ethnic violence threatens the lives and dignity of millions and we live in a time of rapid economic and technological advance and yet several billions of people live in persistent debilitating poverty in this book daniel little dissects these paradoxes offering the clearest perspective on how best to approach international development using both empirical and philosophical approaches little provides a schematic acquaintance with the most important facts about global development at the turn of the twentieth century in doing so he explores what appear to be the most relevant moral principles and insights that ought to be invoked as we consider these facts and then draws conclusions about what sorts of values and goals ought to guide economic development in the twenty first century poverty and human destiny editors doug bandow and david l schindler bring together some of today's leading economists theologians and social critics to consider whether the triumph of capitalism is a cause for celebration or concern michael novak richard john neuhaus max stackhouse and other defenders of democratic capitalism marshal a number of arguments in an attempt to show that among other things capitalism is more christian in its foundation and consequences than is conceded by its critics that as stackhouse and lawrence stratton write the roots of the modern corporation lie in the religious institutions of the west and that as novak contends globalization is the natural ecology of christianity the critics of liberal economics argue on the other hand that it is historically and theologically shortsighted to consider the global capitalist order and the liberalism that sustains it as the only available option any system which has as its implicit logic that stable and preserving relationships among people places and things do not matter and are of no worth in the words of wendell berry should be regarded with grave suspicion by religious believers and all men and women of goodwill bandow and schindler take up these arguments and many others in their responses which carefully consider the claims of the essayists and thus pave the way for a renewed dialogue on the moral status of capitalism a dialogue only now re-emerging from under the cold war rubble the contributors' fresh insightful examinations of the intersection between religion and economics should provoke a healthy debate about the intertwined issues of the market globalization human freedom the family technology and democracy
