roger fenton 1819 1869 was england s most celebrated and influential photographer during the 1850s the golden age of this radically new medium fenton s majestic pictures of cathedrals country houses and varied countryside were without peer in england as were his views of the royal castles and houses of parliament that embodied britain s power but fenton s choice of subjects ranged more widely still he was among the first to photograph the kremlin and other landmarks of moscow and kiev he was commissioned in 1855 to document the crimean war producing early war photographs and he created theatrical orientalist costume pictures and a startling series of lush still lifes fenton had first studied law and painting but soon after he took up the camera he was making photographs that were technically superb and highly original in their handling of composition perspective atmosphere and light always he strove to demonstrate that photography could equal the art of painting and even surpass it he was the force behind the founding of the photographic society later the royal photographic society which worked to advance the profession and encouraged the exhibition of members works throughout britain in a career of a single decade fenton did much to transform photography into a medium of powerful expression and visual delight this exquisitely produced book the first comprehensive publication on fenton in almost twenty years presents eighty five of the artist s finest photographs and discusses every aspect of his work and his remarkable career this book the first to chronicle the life and career of this important artist brings his work once more before the public during the 1880s america s gilded age new york s bowery roared day and night like no other street in the world home to countless beer halls melodrama theatres and dime museum exotic shows this strip of diversions entertained the newly arrived immigrant masses the first generation to work in corporate factories live in high rises eat processed food and banish the night with electric lights as city population densities swelled to a third of a million per square mile these urban workers took a certain darwinian pleasure in staring at freaks living proof that life could be even worse photographer charles eisenmann s studio at 229 bowery stood right in the middle of it all as ldquo the oldest the largest and the best eisenmann practised photography at a time when it was still a black art a series of mysterious and complex procedures executed in darkness working in his studio of elaborate high victorian sets eisenmann acted as court photographer to all of the era s most famous giants dwarfs and exotics classified as monsters by doctors of the day eisenmann s sitters included the four legged lady myrtle corbin the sacred hairy family of burma the diminutive admiral dot a thousand pound fat man zip the pin head and even the biggest hoaxer of them all the inventor of the travelling circus and modern advertising the great p t barnum eisenmann s beautifully crafted photographs made his weird clients as famous and successful as any rock star or royalty since he first dreamed of a career in photography guy gillette has traveled regularly to his wife s family s ranch located outside the small town of crockett texas when gillette first came to the porter place as the ranch has always been known he began to photograph the porter family and their land thanks to gillette s sense of composition these wonderful black and white photographs dating from the 1940s led to his career as a magazine photographer collected here for the first time they document small town life in east texas where guy gillette s sons the musical duo the gillette brothers still run cattle a family of the land offers a portrait of a community over a half century during which remarkably little has changed midway between dallas and houston the porter place is where the south meets the west the pastures began as cotton fields carved out of piney woods and the cowboys use southern curs to control the cattle one of the photographs presented here of a boy and his dog at the veterinarian s office is said to have moved museum of modern art curator edward steichen to tears gillette also captures cowboys at work and at play branding and marketing their animals enjoying a game of dominoes driving trucks with 2 50 air conditioning two windows down fifty miles an hour though photography is often called art says gillette i have wanted to be artless to be a documentarian not an artist telling a story was always the attraction of photography for me the story ends with the outdoor wedding of guy porter one of the gillette brothers at the porter place family labor and land remain inseparable the work of american photographer dave heath b 1931 stuns with its emotional potency exploring themes of loneliness and alienation in modern society heath s photographs depict strangers riding the train watching a thanksgiving parade staring pensively at their dining room table or kissing on the side of a street entirely self taught heath stretches the boundaries of the medium and explores the potential of the photo narrative through handmade book maquettes innovative multimedia slide presentations and other photographic experimentations this is the first comprehensive survey of heath s deeply personal work focusing on his astounding contributions to black and white photography these images span the first 20 years of his career 1949 to 1969 and many of them are previously unpublished filling a major gap in scholarship the catalogue surveys the most groundbreaking facets of heath s creative work and highlights its historical importance heath s art is ripe for rediscovery and this book reaffirms his status as a key figure in 20th century american photography few figures in 19th century photography remain as elusive and intriguing as john beasley greene 1832 1856 over the course of an exceptionally brief career he produced a body of photographs that were publicly admired by his peers and continue to capture the imagination of contemporary audiences born in france to an american banker and trained in the medium of photography by gustave le gray he would be among those early practitioners drawn to egypt hoping to unravel the mysteries inscribed on its ancient monuments he traveled there twice between 1853 and 1855 producing straightforward documentation of the hieroglyphic texts and monuments of most interest to archaeologists as well as some of the most evocative landscape studies ever made in the middle east the pictorial economy of these views all endless sweeps of desert sand and expansive cloudless skies is still stunning today the work he made in algeria is similarly divided between archaeological investigation and breathtaking visual studies signs and wonders introduces greene s work to a new audience with 100 prints and a fascinating text by corey keller that reconsiders his photographic legacy situation his work in the context of critical developments in both archaeology and photography
