the lagoon opens up with a white man but the story is really about the man's malaysian friend arsat framed narrative quite common in conrad's works works quite well in this one tuan the white man serves the same function as marlow the narrator in heart of darkness and lord jim it may seem an unnecessary complication in a short story but framed narrative actually helps to set a tone and atmosphere as well as to provide additional commentary

a brilliant study of aristotle as biologist the philosophical classics of aristotle loom large over the history of western thought but the subject he most loved was biology he wrote vast volumes about animals he described them classified them told us where and how they live and how they develop in the womb or in the egg he founded a science it can even be said that he founded science itself in the lagoon acclaimed biologist armand marie leroi recovers aristotle's science he revisits aristotle's writings and the places where he worked he goes to the eastern aegean island of lesbos to see the creatures that aristotle saw where he saw them he explores aristotle's observations his deep ideas his inspired guesses and the things he got wildly wrong he shows how aristotle's science is deeply intertwined with his philosophical system and reveals that he was not only the first biologist but also one of the greatest the lagoon is both a travelogue and a study of the origins of science and it shows how a philosopher who lived almost two millennia ago still has so much to teach us today in the scenic lagoon cahoon families of frogs and beautiful pink flamingos live peacefully and happily what will happen when a flock of vultures suddenly lands on it what cunning methods will they follow to impose themselves there and finally destroy the unfortunate flamingos a wonderful and powerful fairy tale an adaptation of the dramatic story of the holocaust written and beautifully illustrated by the then 14 year old sivan koen a haunting lyrical graphic novel debut a family is seduced by the song of the creature from the black lagoon in talented young cartoonist lilli carre's first long form work and how each member reacts to the creature's siren call in the lagoon is the crux of the story. Carre experimented with nib pens and brushes while drawing this black and white graphic novel giving the art a different feel from her previous Eisner and Harvey Award nominated story. The tale of Woodsman Pete Lagoon was influenced by the films Creature from the Black Lagoon and Night of the Hunter but reads more like the gothic family narratives of Flannery O'Connor. Rhythms taps the ticking of a metronome are punctuated by silences that pace this sound-driven story.

The white man leaning with both arms over the roof of the little house in the stern of the boat said to the steersman, "We will pass the night in Arsat's clearing. It is late." The Malay only grunted and went on looking fixedly at the river. The white man rested his chin on his crossed arms and gazed at the wake of the boat at the end of the straight avenue of forests cut by the intense glitter of the river. The sun appeared unclouded and dazzling, poised low over the water that shone smoothly like a band of metal. The forests sombre and dull stood motionless and silent on each side of the broad stream. At the foot of big towering trees trunkless nipa palms rose from the mud of the bank in bunches of leaves enormous and heavy that hung unstirring over the brown swirl of eddies in the stillness of the air. Every tree, every leaf, every bough, every tendril of creeper and every petal of minute blossoms seemed to have been bewitched into an immobility perfect and final. Nothing moved on the river but the eight paddles that rose, flashing regularly, dipped together with a single splash while the steersman swept right and left with a periodic and sudden flourish of his blade describing a glinting semicircle above his head. The churned-up water frothed alongside with a confused murmur and the white man's canoe, advancing upstream in the short-lived disturbance of its own making, seemed to enter the portals of a land from which the very memory of motion had forever departed. The white man turning his back upon the setting sun looked along the empty and broad expanse of the sea reach for the last three miles of its course the wandering, hesitating river as if enticed irresistibly by the freedom of an open horizon flows straight into the sea. Flows straight to the east to the east that harbours both light and darkness. Astern of the boat the repeated call of some bird, a cry discordant and feeble, skipped along over the smooth water and lost itself before it could reach the other shore in the breathless silence of the world. The steersman dug his paddle into the stream and held hard with stiffened arms. His body thrown forward the water gurgled aloud and suddenly the long straight reach seemed to pivot on its centre. The forests swung in a semicircle and the slanting beams of sunset touched the broadside of the canoe with a fiery glow throwing the slender and distorted shadows of its crew upon the streaked glitter of the river. The white man turned to look ahead. The course of the boat had been altered at right angles to the stream and the carved dragon head of its prow was pointing now at a gap in the fringing bushes of the bank. It glided through brushing the overhanging twigs and disappeared from the river like some slim and amphibious creature leaving the water for its lair in the forests. The narrow creek was like a ditch tortuous, fabulously deep, filled with gloom. Under the thin strip of pure and shining blue of the heaven immense trees soared up invisible behind the festooned draperies of creepers here and there near the glistening blackness of the water a twisted root of some tall tree showed amongst the tracery of small ferns black and dull writhing and motionless like an arrested snake the short words of the paddlers reverberated loudly between the thick and sombre walls of vegetation darkness oozed out from between the trees through the tangled maze of the creepers from behind the great fantastic and unstirring leaves the darkness mysterious and invincible the darkness scented and poisonous of impenetrable forests
