michael ann holly asserts that historical interpretation of the pictorial arts is always the intellectual product of a dynamic exchange between past and present recent theory emphasizes the subjectivity of the historian and the ways in which any interpretation betrays the presence of an interpreter in past looking she challenges that view arguing that historical objects of representational art are actively engaged in prefiguring the kinds of histories that can be written about them holly directs her attention to early modern works of visual art and their rhetorical roles in legislating the kind of tales told about them by a few classic cultural commentaries of the nineteenth and twentieth centuries burckhardt's synchronic vision of the italian renaissance wölfflin's exemplification of the baroque schapiro's and freud's dispute over the meanings of leonardo's art and panofsky's exegesis of the disguised symbolism of northern renaissance painting this book reclaims hegel's notion of the end of art or more precisely of art's past character not just as a piece of the history of philosophy but as a living critical and interpretive methodology it addresses the presence of the past character of art in both hegel and contemporary philosophy and aesthetics the book's innovative contribution lies in unifying the hegelian thesis with discussions of contemporary art and philosophy the author not only offers a hegelian exegesis but also applies the idea of the past character of art to themes that are related to both hegel's philosophy such as the french revolution and the modern state kantian aesthetics and religion and the sacred space disclosed for art and going beyond hegel such as celan's poetry gramsci's criticism of croce human rights and even the grunge rock band pearl jam conversely such non hegelian explorations will help enlighten what may look like a specific thread of hegel's aesthetics but can be used to shed light on some core motives of his philosophy the author's interpretation of art's past character reclaims the full value attractiveness and philosophical soundness of hegel's thesis while rejecting its interpretation in terms of a complete dissolution of the aesthetic element into the philosophical one hegel and the present of art's past character will be of interest to scholars and advanced students working on hegel philosophy of art and aesthetics history of philosophy political philosophy and art theory
