in living in the landscape arnold berleant explores new ways of thinking about how we live and might live in the landscapes that enfold us through the concepts of aesthetic engagement and environmental continuity he proposes a new paradigm that offers a holistic approach to the meaning of place and places of meaning in our lives although environmental aesthetics is linked in the popular mind to dramatic vistas and monumental landscapes the grand canyon for example berleant is much more concerned with the commonplace settings of everyday life he argues that our active appreciation of or aesthetic engagement with the prosaic landscapes of home work local travel and recreation plays a vital role in our discovery of hidden continuities as well as pleasure and meaning in the places we inhabit berleant begins with a general introduction to environmental aesthetics identifying the kinds of experience meanings and values it involves and describing its historical sources and the issues with which it is concerned in the rest of the book he spotlights new directions in the field as they relate to education community creativity and the sacred and provides an insightful analysis of negative environmental aesthetics throughout he is both thoughtful and entertaining as evidenced in his extended critique of the pop post modern environment of disney world berleant addresses issues commonly associated with the environmental movement e g preservation pollution control and quality of life but his study draws from a wide range of disciplines and for that reason should also appeal to scholars and students interested in art and aesthetics landscape architecture and planning urban and environmental design and cultural geography as well as environmental studies our attitude to nature has changed over time this book explores the historical literary and philosophical origins of the changes in our attitude to nature that allowed environmental catastrophes to happen the book presents a philosophical reflection on human societies attitude to the environment informed by the history of the concept of landscape and the role played by the concept of nature in the human imagination it features a wealth of examples from around the world to help understand the contemporary environmental crisis in the context of both the built and natural environment berque locates the start of this change in human labour and urban elites being cut off from nature nature became an imaginary construct masking our real interaction with the natural world he argues that this gave rise to a theoretical and literary appreciation of landscape at the expense of an effective practical engagement with nature this mindset is a general feature of the world s civilizations manifested in similar ways in different cultures across europe china north africa and australia yet this approach did not have disastrous consequences until the advent of western industrialization as a phenomenological hermeneutics of human societies environmental relation to nature the book draws on heideggerian ontology and veblen s sociology it provides a powerful distinction between two attitudes to landscape the tacit knowledge of earlier peoples engaged in creating the landscape through their work landscaping thought and the explicit theoretical and aesthetic attitudes of modern city dwellers who love nature while belonging to a civilization that destroys the landscape landscape thinking this book gives a critical survey of landscape thought and theory for students researchers and anyone interested in human societies relation to nature in the fields of landscape studies environmental philosophy cultural geography and environmental history written as an advocacy of melancholy s value as part of landscape experience this book situates the concept within landscape's aesthetic traditions and reveals how it is a critical part of ethics and empathy with a history that extends back to ancient times melancholy has hovered at the edges of the appreciation of landscape including the aesthetic exertions of the eighteenth century implicated in the more formal categories of the sublime and the picturesque melancholy captures the subtle condition of beautiful sadness the book proposes a range of conditions which are conducive to melancholy and presents examples from each including the void the uncanny silence shadows and darkness aura liminality fragments leavings submersion weathering and patina in this natural history classic the author takes the reader on field trips to landscapes across america both domesticated and wild she shows how to read the stories written in the land interpreting the clues laid down by history culture and natural forces a renowned teacher writer and conservationist in her native midwest watts studied with henry cowles the pioneering american ecologist she was the first to explain his theories of plant succession to the general public her graceful witty essays with charming illustrations by the author are still relevant and engaging today as she invites us to see the world around us with fresh eyes aesthetics deals with art a human construction but what one experiences when placed before nature is also an aesthetic feeling the countryside is a place of reflection like no other in the art of the landscape raffaele milani interprets natural landscapes as an aesthetic category drawing from philosophical traditions literature and art he calls the reader's attention to a special consciousness originally established during the pre romantic age that has become a distinctive feature of contemporary spirituality focusing on the definition of landscapes in relation to the concepts of nature environment territory and man made settings such as gardens and cities milani examines the origins of the predilection for natural scenery in the works of landscape painters and in travel literature he addresses the distinctness of the aesthetic experience of landscapes analyses the role of aesthetic categories and explores landscape art as a medium of contemplation what emerges is an original morphology of natural beauty derived from the scrutiny of landscape elements most frequently associated with aesthetic emotion the colour of water and the sky earth and stones fire and volcanic eruptions ruins and the mountains an analysis especially relevant given the increasing fragility of our natural environment looking at representations of the irish landscape in contemporary literature and the arts this volume discusses the economic political and environmental issues associated with it questioning the myths behind ireland's landscape from the first greek descriptions to present day post celtic tiger architecture landscape natural beauty and the arts offers probing studies of the complex structure of aesthetic responses to nature each chapter refines and expands the terms of discussion and together they enrich the debate with insights from art history literary criticism geography and philosophy to explore the interrelation between our conceptions of nature beauty and art the contributors consider the social construction of nature the determination of our appreciation by artistic media and the duality of nature s determining in gardening showing that natural beauty is impregnated with concepts derived from the arts and from particular accounts of nature the volume occasions questions of the distinction and relation between art and nature generally and culminates in a set of philosophical studies of the role of scientific understanding engagement and emotion in the aesthetic appreciation of nature any landscape has an unseen component a subjective component of experience memory and narrative which people familiar with the place understand to be an integral part of its geography but which outsiders may not suspect the existence of of course they listen and read carefully this invisible landscape is made visible through stories and these stories are the focus of this engrossing book traveling across the invisible landscape in which we imaginatively dwell Kent Ryden is himself a most careful listener and reader he asks the following questions what categories of meaning do we read into our surroundings what forms of expression serve as the most reliable maps to understanding those meanings our sense of any place he argues consists of a deeply ingrained experiential knowledge of its physical makeup an awareness of its communal and personal history a sense of our identity as being inextricably bound up with its events and ways of life and an emotional reaction positive or negative to its meanings and memories Ryden demonstrates that both folk and literary narratives about place bear a striking thematic and stylistic resemblance accordingly mapping the invisible landscape examines both kinds of narratives for his oral materials Ryden provides an in depth analysis of narratives collected in the Coeur d'Alene mining district in the Idaho Panhandle for his consideration of written works he explores the local essay of place the personal essay which takes as its subject a particular place and a writer s relationship to that place drawing on methods and materials from geography folklore and literature mapping the invisible landscape offers a broadly interdisciplinary analysis of the way we situate ourselves imaginatively in the landscape the way we inscribe its surface with stories written in an extremely engaging style this book will lead its readers to an awareness of the vital role that a sense of place plays in the formation of local cultures to an understanding of the many layered ways in which place interacts with individual lives and to renewed appreciation of the places in their own lives and landscapes a pioneering exploration of the roots of our attitudes toward nature Paul Shepard s most seminal work is as challenging and provocative today as when it first appeared in 1967 Man in the Landscape was among the first books of a new genre that has elucidated the ideas beliefs and images that lie behind our modern destruction and conservation of the natural world departing from the traditional study of land use as a history of technology this book explores the emergence of modern attitudes in literature art and architecture their evolutionary past and their taproot in european and mediterranean cultures with humor and wit shepard considers the influence of christianity on ideas of nature the absence of an ethic of nature in modern philosophy and the obsessive themes of dominance and control as elements of the modern mind in his discussions of the exploration of the american west the establishment of the first national parks and the reactions of pioneers to their totally new habitat he identifies the transport of traditional imagery into new places as a sort of cultural baggage from the acclaimed landscape historian and geographer a comprehensive handbook to understanding the elements that make up the rural landscape selected by choice magazine as an outstanding academic title in this book john fraser hart offers a comprehensive handbook to understanding the elements that make up the rural landscape those regions that lie at or beyond the fringes of modern metropolitan life though the last two centuries have seen an inversion in the portion of people living on farms to those in cities the land still beckons whether traversed in a car or train scanned from far above or as the locus of our food supply or leisure the rural landscape provides a deceptively simple method for approaching the often complex and variegated shape of the land hart divides it into its mineral vegetable and animal components and shows how each are interdependent using examples from across europe and america looking at the land forms of southern england for instance he comments on the use of hedgerows to divide fields the mineral or geomorphological features of the land determining where hedgerows will grow in service of the human animal s needs hart reveals the impact on the land of human culture and the basic imperative of making a living as well as the evolution of technical skills toward that end as seen in the advance of barbed wire as a function of modern transportation hart describes with equal clarity the erosion of land to form river basins and the workings of a coal mine he charts shifting patterns of crop rotation from the medieval rota of food wheat or rye feed barley or oats and fallow to restore the land to modern two crop cycle of corn and soybeans made possible by fertilizers and pesticides he comments on traditions of land division it is almost impossible to find a straight line on a map of europe and inventories a variety of farm structures from hop yards and oast houses to the use of dikes for irrigation he identifies the relict features of the landscape from low earthen terraces once used in the southern united states to prevent erosion to old bank buildings that have become taverns and barns turned into human homes carrying the story of the rural landscape into our frantic era he describes the bow wave where city life meets rural agriculture and plots the effect of recreation and its structures on the look of the land

this book examines the many theories of preferred landscape over the last half century and informs those readers teaching or in landscape practice of the main lines of argument so that they can make up their own minds paul shepheard explains how every architectural move that man makes is set in a landscape he draws on examples of fortified settlements in norman england that reflect occupation and the new world s grid layout cities reflecting reason

landforms are a fast developing art form that enjoy a wide following today because of their multiple uses and their enveloping beauty as formal landscapes that often arise from necessity recycling a coal site for human use or making new use of excess earth they are a pleasure to walk over and through in this collection of his recent work charles jencks explains his particular approach to the landform like the prehistoric earthworks of britain that have been an inspiration such as stonehenge his landforms contain cosmic symbolism and they draw together sculpture epigraphy water gardens scrap metal and architecture they address perennial themes identity patterns of nature death and the power of life but in a contemporary way based on the insights of science so jencks portrays universal aspects of dna the spacetime warp of a black hole the extraordinary way cells divide and unite and some basic forms of life other designs include sharp comments on recent events a water garden of war in france critiques the 2003 invasion of iraq using waterpults and hose guns among other interactive features a white garden made from birch trees flying bones and computer graphics deals with some fatal consequences of modernity jencks addresses with wit and irony some of the strange possibilities that arise with extra large landforms northumberlandia perhaps the largest human figure ever made presents the question of which body parts one can walk on safely which are dangerous and which need to be suppressed what became perhaps the heaviest work of art in the world at 20 million tons was also the opportunity to transform a large open cast mine into a dynamic landscape of giant mounds and sculpted lakes as in his the garden of cosmic speculation to which this book is a sequel jencks seeks to define a new landscape iconography based on forms and themes that may be eternal in the sense that they crystallise nature s laws some of which have been recently discovered to see a world in a grain of sand was a poetic quest of william blake and in a different sense to find the universe in a ritual landscape was a goal of prehistoric cultures jencks allies these spiritual affinities with the view of science that stresses the common patterns that underlie all parts of the cosmos thus making them like our home planet and the universe in a landscape
