the study of gender is deservedly a major focus of research in the discipline of psychology in general and social psychology in particular interest in the topic increased sharply in the 1970s with the flowering of the feminist movement and research has continued to advance since that time in 1987 alice eagly formulated social role theory to explain the behavior of women and men as well as the stereotypes attitudes and ideologies that are relevant to sex and gender enhanced by several extensions over the intervening years this theory became one of the pre eminent if not the central theory of gender in social psychology also over the last decades social psychologists have developed a variety of related approaches to understanding gender including for instance theories devoted to stereotyping leadership status backlash lack of fit to occupational roles social identity and categorization reflecting these elements this e book includes articles that encompasses a wide range of themes pertaining to sex and gender in these papers the concept of social roles appears often as central integrative concept that links individuals with their social environment these articles thereby complement social role theory as the authors reach out to build an extended theoretical foundation for gender research of the future unequal power and status between the sexes usually translates into one sex monopolizing valuable resources and exercising control at the expense of the other these inequalities not only have negative consequences for the fitness and wellbeing of the underpowered sex but also hinder the path to peaceful and prosperous societies intersexual power refers to an asymmetry in the degree of control that one sex exerts over the other it can arise for example from sex differences in social dominance i.e imposed by threat or force leverage i.e conferred by the possession of a resource that cannot be taken by force such as knowledge or fertilizable eggs motivation and in humans in particular social norms and privileged positions in society stereotype is a pervasive and persistent human tendency that stems from a basic cognitive need to categorize simplify and process the complex world this tendency is a precondition for social bias prejudice and discrimination previous research has mainly focused on the content psychological mechanisms and intervention strategies of negative stereotypes as well as the stereotype threat phenomenon induced by an evaluative context where a negative in group stereotype could be confirmed however there is a lack of research examining the psychological process of forming and internalizing social stereotypes the neurocognitive mechanisms of stereotypes and the interventions including potential neurocognitive interventions addressing the consequences of negative stereotypes furthermore as per the behavioral immune system theory the very presence of a pathogen is likely to increase stereotyping across various social categories especially in those with a heightened perception of vulnerability to disease thus stereotypes can be enhanced in the context of pathogen exposure such as the current outbreak of covid 19 pandemic people exposed to the virus are more likely to suffer from personal and institutional stereotypes and discrimination which may cause negative consequences to personal and social well being therefore in the current context of global covid 19 pandemic it is necessary to investigate the increasing biases driven by stereotypes regarding viewing pathogens as a threat which holds across different social categories specifically what constitutes and shapes stereotypes towards people living in epidemic areas what are the consequences of these short term shaped stereotypes what is the relationship between the consequences of these stereotypes and traditional stereotypes i.e stereotypes towards race gender and age will these short term stereotypes interact with traditional stereotypes to exacerbate discrimination or will the recategorization based on the short term stereotypes during covid 19 pandemic allow people to ignore the traditional inferior social identity and in turn to promote social integration among different groups and how can we prevent the increasing tendency of relying on stereotypes and instead increase pro social behaviors in the covid 19 context the current research topic focuses on understanding the psychological process of forming and internalizing social stereotypes the neurocognitive mechanisms of stereotypes as well as interventions including potential neurocognitive interventions regarding the consequences of negative stereotypes and we also aim to gather the latest research investigating the broad psychological process of social stereotyping with an emphasis on the implications under the covid 19 context that is this research topic is also interested in the negative stereotypes specific to covid 19 pandemic as well as relevant preventative interventions aimed at people perceived as at higher covid 19 exposure risk theoretical and empirical research from psychology sociology and related fields is welcome examples of possible themes for manuscripts include but are not limited to the following topics the content of stereotypes social categorization and discrimination based on stereotypes traditional stereotypes and their consequences the psychological process of social stereotype formation and internalization the mechanisms including neurocognitive mechanisms of stereotypes and its consequences the stereotype neutralizing interventions including neurocognitive intervention strategies towards negative stereotypes the psychological process of stereotypes during covid 19 pandemic the social group categorization and social cohesion during covid 19 pandemic the interactions between traditional stereotypes towards social groups seen as inferior in the dominant culture and the short term stereotypes during covid 19 pandemic the strategies of tackling stereotypes in covid 19 pandemic humans are social animals our need to belong is a cross cultural human universal when our desire for social connection is frustrated we can suffer from a host of harmful psychological and physiological consequences as a result social rejection can be an extremely aversive experience that can be strategically employed to inflict harm punishment e g relational aggression social rejection has both emotional antecedents and consequences that is social rejection can be elicited by emotions e g anger disgust etc within the rejecter and can evoke emotional reactions within the rejected e g anger sadness etc thus the role that emotion plays in social rejection is not simple it is multifaceted negative emotions such as anger and disgust can provoke social rejection and reciprocally they can evoke negative emotions in those who are socially rejected positive emotions however may act as a buffer or shield that insulates us from the deleterious consequences of rejection everyday we vicariously experience a range of states that we observe in other people we may feel embarrassed when witnessing another making a social faux pas or we may feel sadness when we see a loved one upset in some cases this process appears to be implicit for instance observing pain in others may activate pain related neural processes but without generating an overt feeling of pain in other cases people report a more literal conscious sharing of affective or somatic states and this has sometimes been described as representing an extreme form of empathy by contrast there appear to be some people who are limited in their ability to vicariously experience the states of others this may be the case in several psychiatric neurodevelopmental and personality disorders where deficits in interpersonal understanding are observed such as schizophrenia autism and psychopathy in recent decades neuroscientists have paid significant attention to the understanding of the social brain and the way in which neural processes govern our understanding of other people in this research topic we wish to contribute towards this understanding and ask for the submission of manuscripts focusing broadly on the neural underpinnings of vicarious experience this may include theoretical discussion case studies and empirical investigation using behavioural techniques electrophysiology brain stimulation and neuroimaging in both healthy and clinical populations of specific interest will be the neural correlates of individual differences in traits such as empathy how we distinguish between ourselves and other people and the sensorimotor resonant mechanisms that may allow us to put ourselves in another s shoes
